

Earn By Selling Photos Online

Posted for Picsala by Gov Ari on June 13th 2010 and filled under Business

To buy and sell photos online, two things are important. First is the ability to find good subjects, and second is the ability to convert these subjects. Photographs must clearly depict these ideas. It is important to understand the details of both. Picsala is a trustworthy platform for photographers. Budding or seasoned, if you are a photographer, Picsala will help you make money by selling your photos online.

Subjects are ideas that you want to communicate. But people who buy photos will have too many options in such subject areas. The best way is to find the maximum number of pictures with the minimum number of competitors. No searching is required when you have access to Picsala. They have a well-organized and very efficient management of online selling processes of photos.

Once you have finalized a subject, think about ways in which it can be communicated. For instance, if the idea is to show a bull run in the stock market, you can click the picture of a snorting bull running on the Wall Street. Here is where this software comes in handy. You can click a picture of a bull in a field or in the countryside and then merge them with another picture where the Wall Street people are standing on the edges and looking in awe. You can also create different versions of the same idea. One idea leads to many more. All you need to do is figure out what is your message and find things that are representative of the same. The same image can also be used for many things. For instance, the photograph of a handshake can use different backgrounds to convey different ideas. A handshake with a car in the background can signify a deal regarding the car. All this will get you good money on Picsala.

Technical Aspects Of Taking A Picture

This is a part of the broader idea of transforming your subject into a set of photos that people will buy. Understand your audience. May be they are publishers of a newspaper or a website. They might want to write something next to the photograph. So instead of taking photos with the subject in the middle, you can move your subjects to one of the sides. This will leave space for the buyer to add text to that photograph as and when they use it.

The resolution of the picture is also of great importance. Most micro-stock photo agencies will require a minimum resolution of 4 megapixels. You will also find many useful tips on Picsala. This site is a one stop portal for buyers and sellers.

Hence a photographer must always keep in mind the person who will buy photographs. Keeping an eye on the consumers and tracking their changing preferences will enable you to sell photos like hot cakes.

You can visit us at:

<http://www.picsala.com>